Part III: Connecting with Water: Creating an Abundant flow

“The starting point of all achievement is desire.”
--Napoleon Hill

We have begun to create structures that are going to support our business. We may not be finished developing those structures, but we can always return to that gateway and spend time there. That is the beauty of working with the Wheel. We can always return to our starting point and begin again. Today we are going to help you begin to create a steady stream of the right and perfect clients to flow into your business.

Once again I want to remind you of where we have been and where we are going. During our first session we began in the Center, remembering and re-aligning with our true purpose. We connected to our true purpose.

Next, we began to seriously look at structures and how to plan and develop structures that dictate our process, rather than just allowing our process to form our structures. . . Some of us may have experienced some resistance as we began to move those structures and begin to see or make necessary changes. If this is true for you, it is important to make small, significant changes you can handle, one step at a time. You will gradually find a supportive structure that funnels more and more support to you. If fear comes up, use it to help you know that you are RIGHT ON TARGET! You are really getting really close to a breakthrough. Right when you are at your biggest fear point is right when you are getting ready to make a big breakthrough. Welcome it as a reminder that YOU ARE ON YOUR PATH! See the fear for what it is – in indicator that you are doing the right thing—and then move through it.

WHY DETERMINE YOUR RIGHT AND PERFECT CLIENT?

Doing this work helps you determine who it is you are really helping. So when you start sending out your message about who you are and what you are offering, YOUR* RIGHT AND PERFECT CLIENT WILL HEAR YOU!

If you are just sending your message out to everyone, they don't hear themselves being called out. In fact, the more narrow your focus, the more effective you are in your business, the more money you make. This group is made up of people that you serve and the specific problem you help them solve. The more clearly you call out this person, the more powerful your business is going to be.

ALWAYS REMEMBER: Money flows to you through other people. The more you can help people, the more they will come to you.

Step 2: Choosing your lucrative category of highest potential people to work with

This is an area that can be difficult for many of us in “helping professions.” We naturally want to help everyone. We have a tendency to be “givers.” But for today, we want to put all of our natural tendencies and resistances on hold and allow ourselves to once again think outside of our self-imposed boxes. So as you begin to think about the category of individuals you can serve, think about what are the most lucrative categories that I can market to. Choose from the following categories:

Business/Entrepreneurs – This area is rapidly rising and entrepreneurs need a wide variety of services and products to support their business growth

Marketing/Sales – From small businesses to corporations, everyone wants help with marketing and sales to attract more clients and gain new business.

Executive/Corporate – Executives within corporations seek out a variety of specialty services to help them advance their careers and/or the company they serve.

Health/Wellness/Beauty – Everyone wants to feel better, look fabulous and be healthy, making this a potentially lucrative category to specialize in.

Spiritual – This category has traditionally been a very low profitability category because most are used to getting this service for free. But when you combine it with others it becomes very dynamic, for instance, helping women create their Divine Feminine Business.

Which category does your business fit into right now?

Combining these categories can help you branch out and open up new areas of service that you may not have thought of. For instance,

- the yoga instructor that decides to do yoga teacher training or teach them how to market themselves;
- the healer that decides to teach people how to be healers or how to create their divine right business;
- the beauty consultant that decides to teach women that beauty is an inside job and becomes a spiritual mentor.
- the business coach that decides to teach clients how to use the medicine wheel to manage their business.
- the Reiki Practitioner that works as the healer for Hallmark or another large company.

What are some creative ways you might like to combine the above categories?

Step 3: Identifying specific “tribes” of potential ideal clients within your category

When thinking about potential clients, you may be helping them with the following:

- How to make a decision that will move them forward
- How to perform/learn a specific skill
- How to get started/step by step
- How to be successful through the use of specific skill that you have become an expert in and have perfected into a “brand.”
Something that you specialize in.
- Certifying others to do what you do, thus providing them a business opportunity.
- Other

Within the category/s you chose, what are some of the specific groups of people that you might work with? Keep an open mind and don't decide yet if they “need/don't need” your services.

Step 4: Brainstorming Outside the Box

Brainstorm OUTSIDE of who you normally think you would work with. For example if you are a healer, brainstorm what specific problems your service can help women in corporations solve. You'll be surprised at how this will help you "map over" what you do to new groups of people that you may not have previously thought of and help you see how your services can benefit people who have the money to pay you handsomely.

This process will take you deeply into what you can truly provide for others. You will be surprised.

Brainstorming Out of The Box

Potential Ideal Client	Problem They Experience (daily is best) "How do they..."	Solution They Want Instead (HINT: Identify specific behavior, actions/situations) "When what they really want is..."	What Do They Need To Learn/Know/Do?	What Is Their Ultimate Outcome?	What Is Their "Why?" "So they can..."
Example: Women who want a promotion	Get taken seriously and seen as capable of taking on a new level of responsibility and leadership.	To be noticed and seen as credible, how to handle increased responsibilities, more people to manage and bigger expectations. How to look the part of the new role they want. Someone to tell them where they may be sabotaging themselves in meetings, or on projects.	Ask for what they want. Better manage their time. Learn how to delegate with authority and confidence. Stop unconsciously giving away their power in meetings.	Rise to the top of their profession.	Prove they can do it, provide for their children and be respected by others.
Example: Women who want out of their corporate job	Figure out what to do next, while working full time.	Someone to give them permission to start something new, and give them a step-by-step plan so they know what to do first, next, etc.	Create an exit strategy. Clarify what they really want to do. Design/plan how to be successful once they leave their corporate job.	To open their own business.	To feel fulfilled and feel that they're making a difference.

Step 5: Testing for “hot or not”

Consider:

1. Is your pool of ideal clients BIG enough to be viable? It must be at least 10,000 people or more.
2. Are your ideas/services flowing upstream or downstream within the culture of your pool of clients?

Flowing upstream within the culture that is already present within your pool means you are attempting to get them to change their mindset and beliefs about your topic.

Flowing downstream means your ideas are ones your pool of clients is likely to accept. Any time you are flowing upstream within your pool’s culture you’ll find marketing and making sales difficult, time consuming and costly. This does not mean you have to change everything you do. It may mean that you must rethink how you are presenting it to others and how you can restructure it to flow with your pool of clients.

3. How important will the people within your pool of potential clients rank solving this problem?

A 10 is a “must solve now” and 1 is “I can live with it for a long time, as is.” This ranking must be SIX or higher to make your business viable.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

4. Do the people within your pool of potential clients have a history of investing in things of a similar nature to what you are offering?

Remember that people will put up with a lot before they decide to invest in solving a problem. So, it's best to focus your business on solving a problem your clients already prioritize as important.

5. Do you love them? You will be spending a lot of time with the people in your client group, which means you need to love these people and what you are doing with them.

Step 6: Making your final choice

Use your answers from your Brainstorming Out of the Box worksheet to complete this description of your Ideal Client.

My ideal client is (Column A) who struggles with (Column B) and wants to (Column C)

by learning how to (Column D)

so he/she can (Column E)

and (Column F)

What is the Big Idea of Your Business?

Your Big Idea will:

Clarify your unique position with your specific pool of clients & Anchor your service in specific results

Your Big Idea is Two simple Sentences.

The first sentence describes the primary problem with your clients struggle with and the core mindset (belief or paradigm) YOU have regarding how this primary problem can be turned around. It will embody your passion. The second sentence describes what gets to happen for your clients as a result of your Big Idea. It is their happy outcome.

Examples:

A professional organizer's Big Idea is:

“Systems liberate you. Once you have removed the chaos you can take your income or your job performance to the next level.”

A coach specializing in coaching credit union board of directors Big Idea is:

“The better the board the bigger the community impact. Each member of the board is contributing to the legacy of the organization.”

A process improvement specialist for entrepreneurs Big Idea is:

“The business owner is the bottleneck. Once you remove the business owner from being the hub of operations, their income can sky rocket.”

A Big Idea for the International Association of Women in business Coaching is:

“Every coach deserves to make a great living helping others. Once a coach values themselves and provides valuable content, they can create a 6+ figure business.”

Five Star Client Exercise
