Imagine it... one week a month...four days, four beautiful, precious, glorious days...just for you. Four days for you to rest, to go within, to be quiet, to dream. Four days to cleanse, to fast, to eat healthy food, to connect to your Spirit, to heal. Why? Just because...just because of the body you were born into because in the body you were built in this time...Four beautiful days, every 28. Can you? Can you imagine it? Can you dream it? Can you even imagine one day? What would it feel like? Could you stand it? (Could your family?) Could you handle three days of silence of no outside input of thought other than your own, along with another day of study, retreat, and creativity? What would you do with the time? How would you feel? What feelings of guilt and shame would arise if you had to neglect a few details, ont cook a few meals, or...even...shhh...call in at work? Would you need support...outside help...a baby-sitter, cook and maid?

How would it change your life? What do you imagine would be different? How would your family treat you? What would be their responses? What do you think it would do to you and for you? Or better yet, think for a would do to you and tor your. Or better yet, think for a moment...how would society be different if this was the norm? What would happen if suddenly women starting calling in-and checking out, clocking out, toking off-even ONE day a month? What if mothers started 'calling in 'well'" for their daughters every month? What would it be like for boys to be envious of being within a female body, rather than proud they didn't get stuck with one? What if girls were proud and happy to be within their female bodies, no matter how they were shaped? What if "that time of the month" was not looked at with dread but anticipation? What if our bodies did not hurt then? What if when "the blues" showed up, we embraced them for the insights and messages they were going to give us during "our stay in the lodge?"

This is the gift of the Moon-Lodge...the Red Tent...the Bleeding Lodge---the ancient practice of indigenous tribes that literally gave women time off, and in most societies, demanded that they take it. Our ancestors considered a woman's menses a very sacred time, for this is when a woman is most spiritually in tune and most sensitive to her surroundings. She is more open and able to receive messages from her inner guidance that will aid her in living a more harmonious existence. Indigenous cultures incorporated systems that made use of this time in a powerful way for the tribe. They created a moon lodge where women could learn from other women how to care for their bodies. They could share with other women their feelings and concerns, and utilize this time to receive message from higher forms of guidance. They would also do this on behalf of the tribe. As they learned how to care for their bodies in an appropriate way, their wombs, and consequently the earth, remained healthy.

So what's stopping you? This is a glorious gift you can give yourself, and by the shear will of God/Goddess, Your Higher Self, and the whole host of heaven, it is YOUR DIVINE BIRTHRIGHT! So what stands in your way?

What stood in my way was mostly myself, my own guilt and shame over not performing appropriately according to the dictates of our present-day society. My own fear of truly owning my own womanhood, my own body. My fear of the Truth I would hear if I truly took the time to slow down and listen. My hesitancy of allowing others to be truly responsible for themselves, and truly taking responsibility for my own life...coupled with my fears of what the house would look like when I returned. But when I finally let go of would look like when I returned. But when I finally let go of those fears long enough to commit that time to myself, what I found was truly amazing.—peace.—joy.—time..organization.—order...grace...I could go on, but I would much rather hear your responses. What do you think you could add to the list If you did it...If you really took the time for yourself, what could you imagine or dream...what seeds of peace, enchantment and joy could you plant in the seedbeds for the next seven generations?

Imagine a world full of happy women...happy women creating their worlds and joyously sharing their lives with the people around them. Happy women, grateful for their abundant lives...happily magnetizing joy, peace, prosperity and happiness to them and all those around them. How long do you think it would take us to shift our world with this type of energy? An instant!

Our current culture and "indoor" habits have separated us from honoring the cycles of the Earth and Moon and these womens' rites have become all but forgotten. However, there are many of us that are feeling called to "resurrect" some of these ancient traditions to see if they have benefit for us in these changing times. In fact, there are many prophesies, as well as current human experience that lead us toward the belief that the Spirits of the Ancient Ones have indeed returned to teach us ways of honoring and healing the Earth. We know that there is wisdom within our wombs that is our birthright. I personally feel that these rituals and the wisdom contained within them hold the keys to our survival questions, and in order to retrieve our answers, we must return to the old ceremonies of honoring ourselves and the planet. But we must do them in a way that makes sense to us NOW!

2. You may want to set aside a space to do the lodge. You can make it as elaborate or a simple as necessary and possible. 4. During this time, it is suggested that you keep your meals simple. Ancient women existed on simple corn cakes during this time, so it might be fun to make some combread. Or you may want to drink juices and teas to assist the body in this cleansing space. It is a great time to utilize all the healing tools you have been given during this course.

6. You may want to create a lovely notebook to keep within the lodge or reserve for your lodge time where you can record your visions, dreams, imaginings and intuitive flashes. You may also want to engage in art projects so having these tools available is also suggested. If you choose to share lodge space with someone, you may want to have a book where all of the information is shared with others. This is a way of unifying the information and making it available to all who visit.

When you perform a ritual like this, you awaken all the spirits of women who have done this in the past and you connect with them. You literally call in the spirit of the Moon Lodge. So, while in the moon lodge it is important to remember to keep the vow of using the transparent well in calling vision for you people, praying. Note for myself alone, forced spirit, do I sust this vision, but that at the people may through strands women from many women's dreams. The weaking created through gathering to share or the New and/or Full Moons and from the records created and keep there can create a fuller tapestry, more easily understood and made real in the ordinary affairs of life. In this way we can begin to make the dream of peace real in our everyday lives.

Some thoughts on Moon-Lodging...

Cycling Together. This was a common practice during times when we lived closer to the earth. Since life then followed the cycles of the Earth and Moon so closely, the activities of our ancestors also closely followed these cycles. Consequently, the women all cycled together, ovulating at the Full Moon and bleeding at the New Moon. Today, artificial lighting has caused our cycles to be unbalanced with the energy of the Moon. As we turn away from this time, the veil thickens for us again and we step back into the present. We begin to reintegrate ourselves back into our 3-D world. This may take some getting used to. Just know that most sacred ceremonies have a life of their own. When you invite it into your space, the energy of the ceremonies of the past come with it. This is a gentle loving space, but requires respect, honor, and quiet. You get out of it what you put into it.
